41. — — Specification of land—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) s 145—Dispute as to land—Specification of land if and when necessary—Civil Court decree for possession—Decree effect of—Magistrate duty of—Procedure Although in a proceeding under s 145 Criminal Procedure Code the disputed land should be thoroughly ascertained by both parties yet where the parties were not at issue upon the question as to what the disputed lands were and neither the Court nor anybody concerned in the dispute was under any misapprehension as to that point there is no ground for holding that the Magistrate who tried the case had no jurisdiction to make an order under the section for want of proper specification of the lands in dispute The duty of a Criminal Court in a case under s 145 Criminal Procedure Code where there is a decree of a Civil Court for possession in respect of the disputed land is to find which party held such Civil Court decree and then to maintain that party in possession it is not necessary that such decree should be a decree for possession as between the parties to the proceeding under 145 Criminal Procedure Code Daulat Koer v Rameswari Koeri I L R 26 Calc 625 followed GORDON SIMS v JOHURRY LAL (1901) 5 C W N 563

42 ——— Transfer of case—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) ss 145 and 526—Criminal case—Bias of Judge—Magistrate s powers under s 145—Breach of peace—Right of the parties The provision of s 526 of the Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898) do not give any power to direct the transfer of any proceedings initiated under s. 145 of the Code Such proceedings do not constitute a criminal case within the meaning of s 526 of the Code A criminal case means a case arising out of and dealing with some crime already committed. It does not include proceedings taken for the prevention of crime Under s 145 of the Code a Magistrate is not at liberty to go into the merits of the claims of any of the parties to the dispute to a right to possess the subject thereof. He can decide only the fact of possession at the date of the order requiring the parties to put in their statements The parties cannot be called upon to furnish a statement of their rights nor can the Magistrate take as the basis of any action he may finally decide upon any conclusion at which he may arrive or at which he may have arrived as to the respective titles of the parties In re PANDURANG GOVIND PUJARI (1900) I L R 25 Bom. 179

The period during which the wajib ul arz of 1860 was in force expired prior to the sale which gave rise to the right of pre emption sought to be enforced Subsequently to the expiration of that wajib ul arz certain rules had been framed with reference to the settlement of the Gorakhpur and Basti districts the material portions of which for the purpo es of the pre ent case were as follows A memorandum of the village customs will be appended to each khewat by the Assistant Settlement Officer when he verifies the jamabandi and it will take the place of the document hitherto known as the wajib ul arz

In regard to any custom or constitution peculiar to the mehal the following matters should be noticed [class (I s 25)] (a) Pre emption (as regards mehals which belong to other than Mahomedan proprietors) when the proprietors expressly demand that it may be noted and prove conclusively that the custom exists At the new settlement made in accordance with these rules no mention of the right of pre emption as obtaining in the mehal in question was recorded Upon these facts it was held by EDGE C J and BURKITT J that having regard to the rules above mentioned framed by the Board of Revenue for the settlement of the Gorakhpur and Basti districts the mere absence of any mention of the right of pre emption in the new memorandum of village customs was in itself no evidence that the custom of pre emption had ceased to exist and that the wajib ul arz of 1860 might be used as evidence of the existence of such a custom Per AIKMAN J —The absence from the new memorandum of village customs of any mention of the existence of a right of pre-emption was a circumstance which the Court would be entitled to take into consideration in any conflict of evidence as to whether or not the custom of pre emption did exist SADHU SAHU v RAJA RAM I L R 16 All 40

But there is a strong presumption against such claims for pre emption when made after perfect partition by persons who are no longer co sharers of the vendor and where the language of the wajib ul arz is ambiguous this presumption may be decisive The wajib ul arz of a village forming one undivided mehal recorded a right of pre emption by custom as existing in favour of 'hissadaran deh' in cases of transfer by a hissadar of his share or hissa to a stranger After a perfect partition on which no new wajib ul arz was framed and after a subsequent sale to a stranger of land in one of the new mehals a person who prior to the partition was a co sharer of the vendor in the undivided mehal but who since the partition owned a share only in another of the new mehal claimed pre emption under the old wajib ul arz as a hissadar deh. Held by the Full Bench upon the construction of the wajib ul arz that he was not entitled to pre emption DALGANJAN SINGH v. MOOD J —The circumstance that possession had not been transferred to the mortgagee was one which had no bearing on the question whether a right of pre emption arose under the terms of the wajib ul arz in the case of a simple mortgage The word intikal as used in Hindustani has the broadest meaning in connection with alienation conveyance assignment or transfer of rights in immoveable property The word hakkiyat means rights and interests in the legal sense of the phrase The word rahn is a generic word indicating all that is included in the English word mortgage and is not limited to usufructuary mortgages but includes simple mortgages also When general words are used in a document they must be understood in a general sense unless they are accompanied by any expression limiting or restricting their ordinary meaning or unless such limitation or restriction arises from necessary implication The words intikal hakkiyat and rahn in the wajib ul arz could be understood only in the most general sense Mortgage as understood in Indian law includes simple mortgage as well as usufructuary and one is as much a transfer of an interest in specific immoveable property as the other A simple mortgage is a transfer being the transfer of the right of sale Held therefore by MAHMOOD J that a right of pre emption accrued under the terms of the wajib ul arz in the case of a simple mortgage by a co sharer of his share to a stranger Per BRODHURST J

15 ———— Non payment of price fixed by decree within the time limited by decree—Effect of an appeal from a decree for pre emption on the time limited for paying in the pre emptive price—Limitation—Civil Procedure Code 1882 s 214 A decree was given in favour of the plaintiff in a suit for pre emption The plaintiff paid in a portion only of the pre-emptive price within the time limited by the decree The defendant appealed Long after the time pre scribed for payment by the original decree had expired the defendant s appeal was dismissed but the time for payment was not extended by the Appel late Court s decree The plaintiff then after the lapse of a period from the date of the appellate decree in excess of that which had been given him for payment by the decree of the first Court, paid in the balance of the pre emptive price which was accepted by the Court. On appeal by the defend ant from the Court s order directing the balance of the pre-emptive price to be received it was held that the order of the Court allowing the payment was without jurisdiction, the decree having on the expiration of the time limited without payment by the plaintiff become a decree in favour of the defendant and the plaintiff having therefore lost his right of pre-emption under it. the windows in question were had been subsequently commenced in 1849 and the Judge of the Court below found on the evidence that the room and windows had been completed and in use for a period of twenty years prior to the date of suit May 18th 1870 that the plaintiffs had enjoyed the light and air through the windows for a period of twenty years without any interruption by the defendants and it being proved that the defendants had by buildings obstructed the light and air coming to the plaintiff s windows he granted an injunction commanding the defendants to take down so much of the wall as rose to the height of

English law before the Prescription Act (which is the law governing the case) the presumption of a grant in the case of a claim to the access and use of light for a building was a presumption of fact the presumption being founded on the consent or acquiescence of the owner of the servient tenement Acquiescence implies knowledge and knowledge may be presumed where the owner is in possession There must be knowledge for twenty years at any rate if the knowledge were for a less period whether there was a grant would be a question of fact and no presumption could arise The question of whether or not there was knowledge is one preliminary to the consideration whether or not a grant is to be presumed Held on the evidence that there had been no knowledge on the part of the defendants during the whole time and therefore there had not been a twenty years enjoyment of the light and air with their acquiescence Held per MARKBY J—The presumption of a lost grant is one of fact An uninterrupted user for twenty years would be evidence from which taken with other circumstances it might be inferred that a grant had existed No patientia or submission on the part of the defendants being shown so as to constitute an acknowledgment of the existence of the right of the plaintiffs to the light and air the defendants were entitled to succeed

77 ———— Obstructing water course —Presumption of title founded on user—Limitation Act 1871 s 27 and Art 31—Continuing act of wrong More than twenty years and possibly fifty or sixty before suit the plaintiff s ancestors and predecessors in estate had constructed and used a pain or artificial water course on the defendants land making compensation to them. The pain by a channel at one part of its course contributed to the water in a tal or reservoir belonging to the defendants and by a channel at another part took the water which overflowed from the tál after the defendants had used as much of the water therein as they required. Less than twenty years before the suit the defendants, without authority obstructed the flow of water along the pain in several places. The Courts below differed as to whether some of these obstructions had not been made more than two years before the suit the rest having been made within ... of Act IX

within two years of suit under the conditions prescribed to give without more a title did not prevent proof of an easement founded on another title independently of the Act Such a long enjoyment as the plaintiff had proved should be referred to a legal origin and the long user of the pain and of the superfluous water of the tál afforded evidence giving rise to a presumption that a grant or an agreement had been made creating an easement Although on the assumption that some of the obstructions in question had existed for more than two years before the suit the plaintiff might not have shown a right under Act IX of 1871 s 27 yet he did not require its aid. Held ... act ... ie is ... ixing ... the period of limitation for obstructing a water cour e did not preclude a suit complaining of ob tructions though made more than two years preceding the date of the commencement of the suit RAJRUP KOER v ABUL HOSSEIN

The plaintiffs were aware of this at the time when the contract was made. The captain was at the time in charge of his ship. At the time of the contract nothing was said by either party as to the person or persons on whose credit the contract was made —all that occurred being that defendants known by plaintiffs to be ... having furnished them with an account of the transactions between them now sued to recover the balance due The defendants admitted the correctness of the debit side of the account but denied in general terms that of the credit side Evidence was given by the plaintiffs of the receipt of the account sales in the ordinary course of business and of the delivery of copies to the defendants from time to time and they were filed as exhibits without further proof It appeared that in the account the defendants were charged on account of local exchange at a rate higher than that actually paid to the Bank with which the plaintiff had made a special arrangement without reference to the contract with the defendants. It also appeared that the plaintiff under an arrangement made with their agents at the ports of consignment had received from them about 1 per cent. on the various consignments by way of return commission and that this arrangement had not been communicated to the defendant Held (i) that the account sales were prima facie proof of the transactions to which they related (ii) that evidence of the contemporaneous oral agreement was admissible (iii) that the defendants were not entitled to the benefit of the special arrangement between the plaintiffs and the Bank (iv) that the plaintiffs were liable to the defendants for the amount received by them as return commission MAYEN v ALSTON I L R 16 Mad 238

owing to a falling market and that the defendant acquiesced in that condition (ii) that the plaintiffs had throughout claimed the right to sell if the condition was not observed and that the defendant inferentially admitted the right claimed by the plaintiff The conclusion to be drawn was that the business was conducted on that basis and that when the condition was broken the plaintiffs right to sell arose according to the course of business notwithstanding the limit of price imposed by the defendant Per SARGENT C J—The result of the authorities is to show that where a factor for sale who has made advances claim the right to sell invito domino the question is whether there was an agreement between the parties either express or to be inferred from the general course of business or from the circumstances attending to particular consignment that the factor should under any and what circumstances have the power to sell against the wish of the owner of the goods The onus of proving such agreement lies on the factor who has made the advances Per FARRAN J—On the whole the authorities warrant the inference that where goods are consigned to a foreign merchant as security for an advance albeit he may be a factor entrusted with the sale of goods on commission and where by reason of the fall in the market or other of the Contract Act as to transactions subsequent to the variance The Court was of opinion that inasmuch as the evidence showed that B was second clerk at the time of his appointment as khajanchi and continued afterwards to fill that office by arrangement between him and the agent of the Bank the question was not whether there had been a subsequent variation of the contract but whether as the surety bond was silent as to this part of the arrangement between the Bank and B and it was made (as the defendants alleged) without their knowledge and consent they were discharged from liability on the ground that a material circumstance had been concealed from them Held that the defendants were not discharged from liability The expression keeping silence in s 143 of the Contract Act clearly implies intentional concealment as distinguished from mere non disclosure The withholding must be fraudulent as necessarily is the case where a material circumstance is intentionally concealed In this case there for his faithful discharge of the duties of khajanchi. The evidence showed that the duties of the two offices were perfectly distinct and therefore even if B had been re appointed to the office of second clerk after his appointment to the office of khajanchi (as it was contended for the defendants was the proper way of regarding what occurred) there would have been no material alteration in the duties of khajanchi which would have relieved the defendants from their obligation as sureties but merely the addition of a new office which would not affect the sureties liability, unless indeed the surety bond contained an agreement that the principal should not undertake any other business It was also contended for the defendants that they were discharged liability inasmuch as in the year 1883 the names on certain bills discounted with the Bank were found to be forged The Bank then made a claim upon B in respect thereof and he repudiated his liability The defendants contended on the authority of Phillips v Foxall L R 7 Q B 666 that it was the duty of the Bank to have informed them of

The Native Appellate Court and the Native Land Court of New Zealand have been given exclusive jurisdiction over the civil rights of natives in land and in matters of succession probate and administration the object being to provide for determination of disputes among the natives according to their own custom. The Statute which constituted the Native Appellate Court declares that the decision of the Court shall be final and conclusive. Held that this does not exclude a petition to His Majesty for leave to appeal. The Native Appellate Court was given jurisdiction over matter which but for its creation would have been subject to the jurisdiction of the ordinary law Court and the exclusion of the right to appeal would therefore be a forfeiture of existing rights on the part of Sovereign and subject. Theberg v Laudry L R 2 A C 10 and Cushing v Dupuy L R 5 A C 415. In the matter of the Will of WI MATUA (1908) 12 C W N 1081

Unorthodox practices effect of—Evidence of execution of will A Sikh is a Hindu within the meaning of that term as used in s. 2 of the Probate and Administration Act (V of 1881) An application therefore for probate of the will of a Sikh testator was held to have been rightly granted under that Act Since the case of Doe dem Kishenchunder Shaw v Baidam Beebee 2 Morley s Digest 22 the view that Sikhs are Hindus has always been acted upon by the Courts in India ... is in ... ying ... a od ... the meaning of the early legislation on the subject and not upon the alternative rule of justice equity and good conscience also sanctioned by that legislation In s 331 of the Indian Succession Act (X of 1865) the term Hindu is used in the same wide sense as in the earlier enactments and includes Sikhs A Sikh or Hindu by becoming a member of the Brahmo Samaj does not necessarily cease to belong to the community in which he was born In this case however it was found on the evidence that the testator a Sikh by birth never became a professed Brahmo Departures by the testator from the standard of orthodoxy binding upon him in matters of diet and ceremonial observances assuming them to be established were held not to have the effect of excluding him from the category of Hindu in the Probate and Administration Act he having been born within such category and never having become otherwise separated from the religious communion in which he was born Objections having been taken that the will had not been duly executed and that alterations had been made in it since its execution the Judicial Committee (affirming the decision of the Chief) decided on the evidence in favour of its due execution in the form in which it was produced to the Court on the application for probate BHAGWAN KOER v J C BOSE (1903)

ant gave the plaintiff another promissory note for R744 In an action on the notes brought under Act V of 1866 the plaintiff obtained a decree which was set aside on the defendant's application and leave was given to him to appear and defend Written statements were then filed on the plaintiff's application Held by MACPHERSON J that the two promissory notes were given as security for the whole of the plaintiff's claim that the items for balance of bets and lotteries and for the Secundra Raffle being rendered illegal by the Lottery Act (V of 1844) part of the consideration for the notes was illegal and no action was maintainable upon them His Lordship therefore dismissed the plaintiff's suit On appeal held by COUCH C J that the promissory note for R7 000 was not vitiated by the R1 149 being part of the consideration for it although that portion of the latter sum which was won by lotteries was obtained by an illegal transaction it was not illegal for the defendant to receive the money and having done so to pay the plaintiff his share or to promise to do so But the money paid in respect of the Secundra Raffle being money paid in execution of an illegal purpose was an illegal consideration which did entitled the plaintiff to recover on the note Held further that the note for R744 was given upon good consideration All the facts of the case being stated in the plaintiff's written statement the Court might allow the plaint to be amended and frame an issue as to what amount was due to the plaintiff in respect of the consideration for the note for R7 000 Held by MARKBY J that way Company and the East Indian Railway Company for damages for non delivery of goods alleged to have been delivered at Ghaziabad for conveyance to Bombay on the 16th May 1898 From Ghaziabad to Delhi the railway line belongs to the East Indian Railway Company and from Delhi to Bombay the line is that of the Bombay Baroda and Central India Railway Company Both Companies were therefore made defendants in the suit On the merits the suit was dismissed as against the Bombay Baroda and Central India Railway Company but a decree was passed against the East Indian Railway Company for R4 617 It appeared that no notice of plaintiff s claim under s 140 of the Indian Railways Act (IX of 1890) had ever been directly addressed to the East Indian Railway Company The plaintiff relied on a notice dated the 28th July 1898 which he had addressed to the Bombay Baroda and Central India Railway Company making a claim against that Company The latter Company had at once informed the East Indian Railway Company of the plaintiff s claim and had given notice that in case the plaintiff sued them they would expect the East Indian Railway Company to bear all the expenses Further correspondence took place between the two Companies with reference to the plaintiff s claim and on the 31st October 1898 the Solicitors of the East Indian Railway Company wrote to the plaintiff s Solicitors as follows

7 ——— ss 77 140—Refund of an overcharge—Notice—Letter—Manner of service—Statement of fact not a proof of fact Plaintiffs who were merchants residing at Poona entered into an agreement with the Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company that the latter should deliver consignments of goods despatched from Wadi at Poona at a certain rate. Several consignments were accordingly delivered by the Railway Company at Poona and they were paid for according to the agreed rate At the time of the delivery of the last consignment the Railway Company refused to deliver it unless all the consignments including those already delivered and paid for were paid for at a higher rate. The plaintiffs thereupon paid the higher rate under protest and sued the Railway Company in the Court of Small Causes at Poona for the recovery of the overcharges claimed and received by the defendant The defendant contended that the suit was not maintainable inasmuch as no notice of the claim was served by the plaintiffs according to s 77 of the Indian Railways Act (IX of 1890) The Judge overruled the defendant s contention and allowed the claim holding that a notice under s. 77 of the Act was not necessary because the section contemplated overcharges recovered before the delivery of the goods to the consignee and not to overcharges recovered after the delivery as was the present case He further held that if notice was necessary it was given by the plaintiff inasmuch as there was an allegation that a notice had been sent in a letter addressed to the Agent of the Company care of the Station Master Poona, by the plaintiffs The defendant having applied under revisional jurisdiction Held that notice was necessary The overcharge referred to in the section is not confined in its meaning to an overcharge recovered before the delivery of the goods to the consignee at their destination Held further that the delivery of a letter under s. 140 of the Act must be in exact compliance with the terms of the section and it must be delivered to the Agent at his office The statement of a fact in a letter is no proof of the fact itself GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY COMPANY v DEWASI (1907) I. 85 ———— and cl (b)—Receipt by mortgagee Receipts passed by a mortgagee for sums paid on account of the mortgage debt and exceeding R100 each are not inadmissible in evidence for want of registration under Act III of 18[illegible] s. 17 The technical term consideration implies that the person to whom the money is paid himself limits or extinguishes his interest in the land in consideration of such payment Such limitation or extinction (if there can be said to be any) as results from the payment on account of the mortgage debt is the legal consequence of such payment and not the act of the mortgagee The payment reduces the sum due at the time on the mortgage and thus modifies the account between the mortgagor and mortgagee But it does not operate to limit or confine within narrower limits the right or interest of the mortgagee in the land which is simply to have the payment of the principal and interest secured on the mortgaged premises by some one or other of the remedies available for that purpose Money paid on account of a mortgage-debt is not the consideration for the limitation or extinction of so much of the interest in the land created by the mortgage and a receipt for such a payment need not therefore be registered under s 17 cl (b) of the Registration Act III of 18[illegible]7 Dalip Singh v Durga Prasad I L R 1 All 44 dissented from SHIDLINGAPA v CHENBASAPA I L R 4 Bom 235

The defendants appealed and contended that they were not bound to produce the document for registration and that the Court was wrong in permitting the above issue to be raised and determined in this suit and that the document being inadmissible as evidence of the contract no oral evidence of the contract was receivable The plaintiff contended that there was an implied obligation upon the defendants to register the document arising from the fact that the document contained the true contract between the parties and that the object of the suit being to compel registration the document although not registered could be given in evidence to prove the contract between the parties Held

56 ——— Priority between registered and unregistered documents—Optional and compulsory registration—Acts XVI of 1864 XX of 1866 and VIII of 1871—Interpretation of statutes The registration of documents under Act XVI of 1864 XX of 1866 or VIII of 1871 does not give them effect as against documents which might have been but were not registered under one of those Acts S 50 of Act III of 1877 has no retrospective operation upon such documents the preference which it gives to registered over unregistered documents is confined to documents registered under Act III of 1877 According to the registration law as it stood before Act III of 1877 came into force there was no competition grounded upon registration between documents optionally and documents compulsorily registrable The Legislature while possessing the power to divest existing rights is not (in construing statutes) to be understood as intending to exercise that power retrospectively to any greater extent than the express terms of or necessary implication from its language requires A and B (two brothers) purchased a house on the 19th July 1871 and mortgaged it to the plaintiff for R580 by san mortgage dated the 21st July 1871 and duly registered In 1874 the plaintiff sued upon his mortgage and obtained a decree directing satisfaction of his claim by the sale of the house The house was accordingly sold by the Court and purchased by the plaintiff for R325 He obtained a certificate of sale dated the 15th October 1875 The certificate was duly registered. On applying to the Court for possession of the house the plaintiff was resisted by the defendant on the ground that he was in possession under two mortgages dated the 20th July 1871 and executed the one by A and the other by B These mortgages were not regi

57 ——— Sale under registered and unregistered deeds—Innocent purchasers Per GARTH C J —The only reasonable construction of s 50 of Act VIII of 1871 is that where property under the value of R100 is purchased by two innocent purchasers the one by a registered and the other by an unregistered deed and there is no fraud shown or other circumstances which in equity would protect the unregistered purchaser against the registered the title of the latter shall prevail. The section contains no such qualification as that a purchaser under an unregistered deed who has obtained possession would have priority as against a subsequent purchaser under a registered deed and the Courts are not at liberty to import such a qualification into the section Per PONTIFEX J—S 50 is intended to apply to the case of two innocent purchasers giving the preference to the one who has taken the greater precaution to secure his title but is not intended to apply to the case of a subsequent purchaser who registers but who at the date of his purchase had actual notice of a prior unregistered purchase FUZULUDDEEN KHAN v FAKIR MAHOMED KHAN I L R 5 Calc 336

———— Jhum cultivation in Sylhet—Regulation extinguishing proprietary rights and giving compensation—Onus of proof as to applicability of Regulation—Question of fact concurrent decisions of Courts in India on—Proof of reason for taking profits of jhum lands into account in estimating income of settled estate—Long possession and enjoyment as proof of title Regulation III of 1891 (issued under Statute 33 Vict C 3) recited in the preamble that the officers who effected the permanent settlement of certain estates in Sylhet included for the purposes of assessment among the assets of those estates under the designation of jhum the income then derived by the proprietors of those estates from shifting cultivation carried on by them or their dependents beyond the limits of those estates that the cultivation shifted from year to year over immense and altogether undefined areas and the tracts of land over which they extended were not specified at the time of the settlement and in consequence of this right of various and in some cases vague descriptions are from time to time asserted by the said proprietors over such areas that it is thus impossible for any person to obtain a safe and clear title to land in those areas and the extension of cultivation is in consequence impeded and that it is expedient that the rights if any corresponding to the said jhum assets should be commuted. S 2 enacted that all such rights should be deemed to have been extinguished and by s. 3 it was declared that all proprietors of such estates should be entitled to compensation. The Government extended the above Regulation to certain areas under jhum cultivation belonging to the appellants who and their predecessors in title had held them since 1837 In a suit brought against the Secretary of State for India in Council by the appellants they alleged that the land in dispute appertained to talukhs which had been settled with their pre[illegible]

long in the enjoyment of the predecessors in title of the appellants a Regulation which would have the effect of confiscating proprietary rights and giving compensation in exchange it lay upon the Government to show that the facts of the case were such as to bring it within the operation of the jhum lands Regulation Held also that the question whether lay within or without the limits of the settled estates was not a question of fact on which the concurrent decisions of the Courts in India could be accepted as final In a sense it was one of fact but at every point in the process of reasoning considerations of law had to be regarded It was not disputed that the taluks held by the appellants had been settled with their predecessors in title at the permanent settlement and that the profits of the jhum lands in dispute had then been brought into account in estimating the assets of the talukhs but the parties differed as to the reason why they had been so taken into account Held that on the documentary evidence in the case there was after such a lapse of time not sufficient to show whether they had been so taken into account because the jhum lands formed part of the settled estate as contended for by the appellants or because they had been treated as assets accruing to the owners of the settled estate but derived from land lying outside it as the Government contended. No confident conclusion therefore could be drawn from the evidence as to whether the disputed land was part of the settled estate or was beyond its limits Held however that the pos[illegible] of the disputed land by the [illegible] taken to [illegible] 1843 and 1855 in which it had been confirmed by the Government was sufficient to prove their title Since the last named date such possession and enjoyment had been continuous HAIDAR KHAN v SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA (1908)

for possession of property by right of inheritance the Court framed six issues four of which it tried and decided With reference to its finding upon the principal of these issues which related to the plaintiff s legitimacy the Court dismissed the suit observing that in the view which it took of the case the determination of the remaining issues was unnecessary Some of the defendants had filed a statement of defence upon which no issues were framed and no evidence taken apparently in consequence of the attention of the Court being directed almost exclusively to the main issue as to the plaintiff s legitimacy There was no formal order excluding evidence on any point. On appeal the High Court reversed the first Court s finding on the issue with reference to which the suit had been dismissed below Held by EDGE C J and MAHMOOD J (STRAIGHT J dissenting) that s. 562 of the Civil Procedure Code applied not only to cases where the first Court had expressly excluded evidence, but also to cases where the parties were or might have been misled by the act of the Court as to the issues or the evidence necessary and where in consequence of the Court erroneously considering one issue only the parties did not tender or bring forward their evidence and that as in the present case evidence had been excluded in this broad sense s. 562 (the operation of which in such cases should be rather expanded than limited) was applicable and the case should be remanded for trial of the remaining issues Held by STRAIGHT J contra that with reference to ss. 562 563 and 564 the case could not be remanded under s. 562 because it had not been disposed of upon a preliminary point so as to exclude evidence of fact and the Court should therefore proceed to dispose of it upon the evidence on the record if any and that an issue should be remitted to the lower Court under s 566 MUHAMMAD ALLAHDAD KHAN v MUHAMMAD ISMAIL KHAN I.L. and MILLER, JJ (Chief Justice dissenting) that such subsequent suit was barred Per SIR ARNOLD WHITE CJ —The question whether a matter ought to have been made a ground of attack within the meaning of s 13 Expl II of the Civil Procedure Code will depend on the facts of each case Where the two different kinds of heirship under which a person claims property cannot co exist he is not bound in a suit based on one kind of heirship to join the other in the alternative when the former if proved will necessarily negative the latter It cannot be said that a party might and ought to have claimed alternatively in the view that the ground of title set up was false or that he would be unable to prove it Per WALLIS J —The question of what ought to be made a ground of attack under s 13 Expl II must be determined by the provisions of s 42 of the Civil Procedure Code The first question to be considered in such cases is whether the provisions of s 42 required the plaintiff to join in the former suit the ground of attack in the subsequent suit Where a person claims as heir the matter within the meaning of s 42 is his heirship and he is bound to include in one suit all the different grounds on which he bases his heirship as far as practicable It will not be practicable to join in one suit the different grounds only when the evidence in support of one ground will be destructive of the other Ramaswami Ayyar v Vythinatha Ayyar I L R 26 Mad 60 followed MILLER J —The construction of the word ought in s 13 Expl II of the Code of Civil Procedure must to a great extent depend on considerations of hardship and inconvenience caused to the parties There is no hardship or inconvenience in requiring a plaintiff suing as heir to state all the facts on which he bases his heirship even though it may result in the presentation of an alternative case while great inconvenience and hardship may be caused to the defendant by allowing the plaintiff to keep a ground in reserve Muthumadeva Naik v Sundramuthum deva Naik 7 Mad H C 160 approved MASILAMANIA PILLAI v THIRUVENGADAM PILLAI (1908) I L R 31 Mad 385

13 —————— Successive purchase of the same land at two execution sales—Suit to set aside one such sale—Purchaser's defence—Whether he is bound to set up title acquired at the other sale—Ground of defence which ought to have been taken A purchased village S in execution of a decree obtained by him against C in the Small Cause Court Subsequently A through B insti succeeded In this suit A did not set up as a ground of his defence the title obtained by him at the mortgage sale Held that A was not bound to do so and a suit by A to recover the lands in village S purchased at the mortgage sale is not res judicata under Expl II of s 13 of the Civil Procedure Code Per BRETT J —Expl II of s 13 of the Civil Procedure Code refers to the title litigated in the former suit as distinguished from the relief claimed When several independent grounds of action are available a party is not bound to unite them all in one suit though he is bound to bring before the Court all grounds of attack available to him with reference to the title which is made the ground of action This rule equally applies to the converse case of a defendant when pleading in his defence Pittapur Raja v Venkatta Mahipati Surya I L R 12 I A 116 and Rama Swami Aiyar v Vythinath Aiyar I L R 26 Mad 760 relied on MOHABIR TEWARI v PURBHOO NATH CHOWBEY (1908) 12 C W N 292

2 ESTOPPEL BY JUDGMENT

1 ———— Rule as to estoppel by judgment—Civil Procedure Code 1859 s 2 The doctrine laid down in the Duchess of Kingston's Case 2 Smith's L C 6th Ed 679 as to estoppel by judgment is applicable to cases tried under Act VIII of 1859 the second section of which is consistent with that rule But the Judicial Committee reversing the decision of the Court below considered that the doctrine had no application in the present case the judgment relied on not being the judgment of a Court of concurrent jurisdiction directly upon the point upon the same matter and after an examination of the whole evidence restored the judgment of the first Court KHUGOWLEE SING v HOSSEIN BUX KHAN 7 B L R 673 15 W R P C 30

2 ———— Judgment not inter partes—Evidence Act (I of 1872) ss 11 13 40 41 43—Admissibility in evidence of judgments not inter partes Per CARTH CJ JACKSON PONTIFEX and MORRIS JJ (MITTER J dissenting) —A former judgment which is not a judgment in rem nor one relating to matters of a public nature is not admissible in evidence in a subsequent suit either as a res judicata or as proof of the particular point which it decides unless between the same parties or those claiming under them In a suit between A and B the question was whether C or D was the heir of H If C was the heir of H then
